'Friends of Blean Church'

is a newly formed group whose aim is to help preserve the church for present and future generations of Blean and Tyler Hill

St Cosmus and St Damian in the Blean

St Cosmus and St Damian in the Blean has a long history within the Blean and Tyler Hill area. The present church was built in early 1230`s. Over the hundreds of years, changes and alterations have taken place - the most recent being the installation of mains water and toilet facilities.

The 'Friends of Blean' will help

Do you feel the church should be an important part of village life?

Do you have family links with the village and the church?

Do you wish to ensure that the church is available for family occasions such as baptisms, marriages and funerals?

Do you want to preserve the local historic heritage?

Perhaps you are a member of the church family and appreciate the activities of the church and wish to continue your support.

We would welcome you as a `Friend`

You would receive a regular newsletter giving you details of activities and the progress of projects, and a personal invitation to join in events arranged by the group - social, local interest and fundraising.
